Almost every fraud busted by QCM has seen insider purchases shortly before the bitter end. Another notable example is Wirecard $WDI, where fraudsters Marcus Braun was a huge buyer. Now he rots in jail where he belongs.

There are multiple reasons. In my experience, fraudsters understand that the market may gauge the validity of fraud allegations based on stock price performance. By keeping SP as high as possible they hope investors will shrug and forget about the shorts.

It doesn't take much brain power to now be very bearish on Amyloid plays...that is evident already- no one is paying for it. Not the US govt, not private hospitals. There's nothing novel in Adrian's supposed bearishness on Amyloid beta ..

I'm not going to make it easy for you. You need to understand the various kinds of amyloid in the disease pathology.... That's the difference between \$SAVA and all these other clueless amyloid-beta companies. You need to find out yourself.

Good try fella... again,there are various 'states' of amyloid. You don't understand that. Secondly, if you understand the pathology of the disease, you would know that the placebo-effect risk is negligible in the OL data released.and....

MaxTweets @Maxolulbikunle · Aug 28, 2022
They already have placebo-controlled biomarker data - even though that is only for 28-days, that data was essentially complemented by the 6-month OL biomarker data. See, the tea leaf work here is tying things together , which is impossible if you're a short!

Lol.. I'll give you a hint... there's solid amyloid, there's also circulating amyloid. Do your research to find out the difference. I don't know why stop at 18 instead of 56, but that's an executive decision. It has no bearing on the result.

MaxTweets @Maxolulbikunle · Aug 28, 2022
The result was still stellar at 28. And knowing they're a small company at that time, they may have been trying to be more efficient with the $$ from the NIH... and expecting to move forward with the OL extension and use the money for that instead..

No biology experiment (ever) shows 0.97 correlation between biochemical measures, much less a dozen that are overall unchanged. This graph alone is proof-positive of data manipulation of clinical trial data by $sava and Wang

1 6

Jesse brodkin @jesse_brodkin · Aug 28, 2022
Here's another straight-up admission of data manipulation; first and second cohort (pills vs cherries) of patients are statistically significantly different for no reason other than an investigation of data manipulation was started between the cohort readouts $sava

Jesse brodkin @jesse_brodkin · Aug 28, 2022
The entire basis for their drug "discovery" has been retracted. There is no non-opioid Naloxone binding site (where Simufilam supposedly binds). It started with a lie and just got out of control necessitating larger and larger lies to keep the story going $sava

Table 1. FLM expression (Optical intensity of Western blot bands, arbitrary units)

AT cells	M2 cells	SA-M2 cells	Not carrier
FLM	100.0000	100.0000	100.0000
FLM	100.0000	100.0000	100.0000

AT cells and absence in M2 cells by Western blotting using a specific anti-FLM antibody (Table 1). FLM is a well-known to the human neurodegeneration (NMDA) cell line and is present in neurons and the binding was robustly detected by antibodies. However, the results of the Western blotting suggest that the binding is not by non-opioid Naloxone, but rather by a novel site distinct from NMDA (Fig. 2). Naloxone (NMDA) binding to AT cells suggested that these cells (and presumably their

The accusation goes that with C14, you can't get PTI-125 with 57.7Ci/mmol. I kind agree with this. If policy permits, you can address this?

Lindsay Burns 5:11 PM
Anyone in drug development knows this is a typo. It is being corrected with the journal. The whole specific activity of the lot that was produced was 1-2 Ci. This was then used in our biodistribution study (GLP) and the rest was sent to Dr. Wang for this affinity assessment.

It is also 100 ug of purified FLNA, not 0.1 ug. We will correct this. And the math should work now.

Dr. Burns, I think 1e-12M of PTI-125 can't produce 10000DPM. There is not enough radioactivity. Oh, I got it, in that change to 100ug, the corresponding PTI125 used also increased in the same magnitude, therefore x axis scale will be increased by the same order. So that it will be 1e-9M PTI125 for that data point.

Thanks. Samuel Ma

Rush terminated all coop with Wang in 11/2021. $SAVA discord had a discussion, someone did some digging, found Rush board held a special meeting, after internal review, board decided to end all ties, projects and clinical trials. Conveniently Discord forgot their own findings.

If no 14C ever used, then it's an open-and-shut case. As for the amount of FLNA, it is more obvious. If each assay used 100 ug (triplet 30x3 = 90 samples, 100 ug x 90 = 9000 ug = 9 mg), it would require at least 10 lbs of brain tissue.
